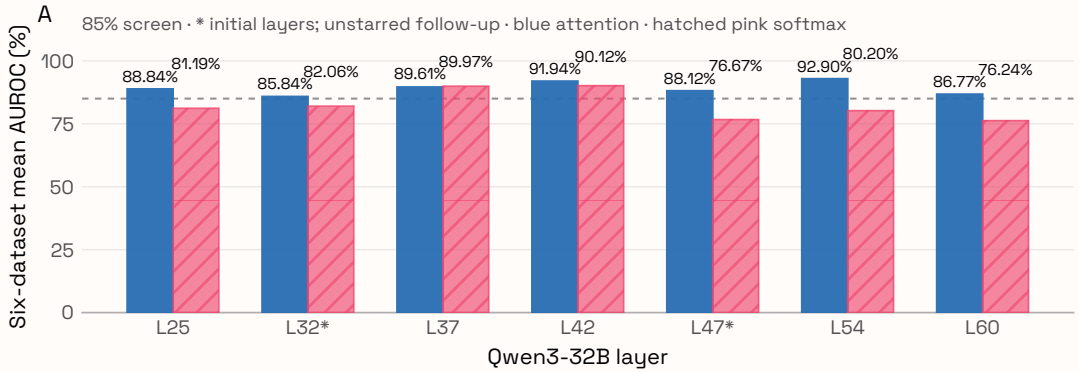
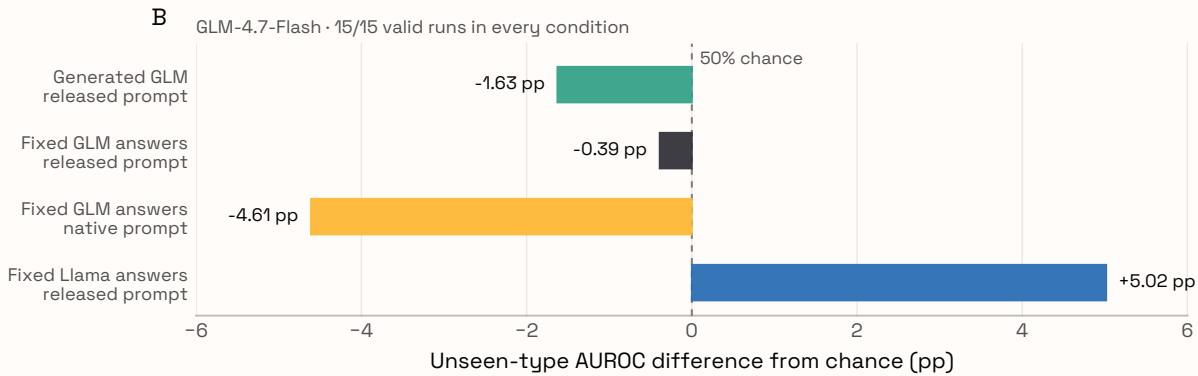
Diagnostic boundary conditions for heterogeneous transfer

Layer coverage, response source, and probe architecture each change the observed result under a bounded comparison.

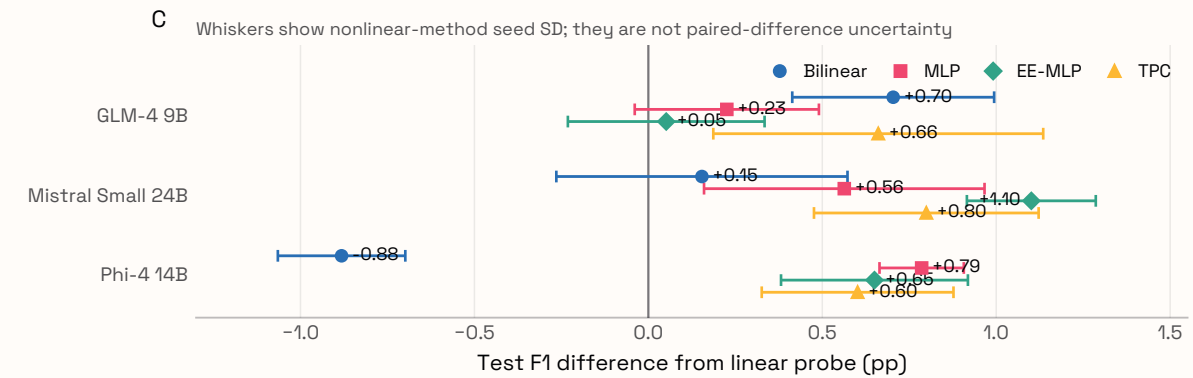
Layer coverage changes the Qwen3 diagnosis



Response source shifts unseen-type transfer



Nonlinear probe gains depend on model and architecture



These diagnostics localize sensitivity; they do not identify a single architecture-independent causal mechanism.